“ My Daddy was a legend. The Deal. Truly one of a kind. Nobody in this world can tell me or convince me otherwise. I loved him and he loved me no matter the circumstances. He was my best friend in the world. Superman in my eyes.

One time we were in lake Havasu Arizona, and we had plans to go striper fishing. We had asked a local what they bait to use. This led us to frozen anchovies and a midnight fishing adventure. I'd fished in the dark, before but this was different. It was intense darkness. There are hardly any clouds out west and the start looked absolutely phenomenal.

We began fishing, or should I say “wishing”, because we didn't catch a damn thing. About an hour went by when we started hearing noises from around the bend of the bank we were fishing from. My Dad walked around the bend and came back very slowly and quietly.

“We have to leave” my daddy said.

I asked what was up, he said “there a bunch of racoons right behind that bush that smell our anchovies” we booked it out of there!!!

So many stories and memories. I'll love and miss him forever.

“ To my loving brother, where do I start. I love you so much.. You have taken a piece of my heart with you. I will miss our talks that you and I only shared. I will miss that great smile and how you always made me laugh. The fish pictures that you always shared. What I won't do right now for a fish picture. The dance moves like no other had.. the love that we shared. RIP until we meet again. The only comfort I have is that I know that you are with ED and Weezie partying like ROCKSTARS with no more emotional or physical pain. You will be forever missed. Your loving sister Julie

“ Joe..... My husband we had so many good times together, he and I did some things together on our bucket list. He is always caring, giving and loving and that big smile he has is worth a million words. He taught me to be a great fisher women, he taught me something I never knew I had and that was Love! Joe is always Spontaneous to pick up and go at a drop of a dime and we would just drive for hours to go nowhere! Forever loving you baby, you will always be in my heart forever because LOVE COMES FROM THE HEART! RIP my forever Love!
