“ Hi mom. Well your time with just Robi is up. Pop finally is reunited once again with you two, but not without many years of fighting with his health. Friday morning we will be laying pop down to rest at his final resting place with you. Mom there are still several days I can't get over how young you were when god gave you your wings and for awhile I was mad about that. It took awhile for me to understand that everything happens for a reason and I wanted to know his reason for taking you which I know I will never know and have come to terms with it. I still remember that phone call when daddy called me and told me that I need to get to the house it's not good at all. I got dressed ran out to my ranger and even turned my blue light on so I could get there faster. I know daddy is now so happy to be back with you again. Just remember I will be checking in on the guys at times so stay out of trouble. 😞
