“ There is no beginning nor end of memories between us. Just lots and lots of them. One that we shared and laughed over more than most was... we're in the basement on Schollcrest Ave. and Grandmom opens the basement door. (Thank God her legs were not good or she would have come down and killed us when she found out what we were really doing!)

She yells down "What are you two doing down there? It stinks again!!!" (I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE THINKING AND IT WASN'T THAT) so Sue Ann yells back, "We're dying Terry's hair Grandmom." "Again? Her hair's gonna fall out you dye it so much" she says with a huff as she slams the door shut and we hear her stomp to the living room.

Meanwhile down in the basement...strewn about is a used Curl Free chemical curl relaxing kit, a body bent over an ironing board on which said bent body's chestnut colored hair is fanned out under a very damp kitchen towel, with an iron on the towel being pressed around by the hand belonging to the rapidly balding partner in crime!!!! Those were the days my friend my oldest (and older SHE HATED WHEN I REMINDED HER OF THAT) and dear friend. You left me alone, the last of the Three Musketeers. 🙏🙏🙏🥹🥹🥹
